

The contention of the two famous Houses,
Brothers to go seeke else-where, but in your madnesse
You bury brother-hood.

Edw. Alas poore Clarence, is it for a wife
That thou art male-content,
Why man be of good cheere, Ile prouide thee one.

Cla. Nay, you playde the broker so ill for your selfe,
That ye shall giue me leaue to make my choise
As I thinke good: and to that intent
I shortly meane to leaue you.

Edw. Leaue me, or tarry, I am full resolu'd,
Edward will not be ty'd to his brothers willes.

Qu. My Lords, do me but right,
And you must confesse, before it pleas'd his highnesse
To aduance my state to Title of a Queene,
That I was not ignoble from my birth.

Edw. Forbeare my Loue to fawne vpon their frownes,
For thee they must obey, nay shall obey,
And if they looke for fauour at my hands.

Mont. My Lord, here is the Messenger return'd from France.

Enter Messenger.

Ed. Now sirra, what letters? Or what newes?

Mes. No Letters my Lord,
And such Newes, as without your highnesse pardon,
I dare not relate.

Ed. We pardon thee, and (as neere as thou canst) tell me,
What saide Lewis to our Letters?

Mes. At my departure these were his very wordes.
Go tell false Edward thy supposed King,
That Lewis of France is sending ouer Maskers,
To reuell it with him, and his new bride.

Ed. Is Lewis so braue? Belike, he thinkes me Henry.
But what sayde Lady Bona to these wrongs?

Mes. Tell him, quoth she, in hope heel proue a widdower
Shortly, Ile weare a willow Garland for his sake.

Ed. She had the wrong,
Indeed she could say little lesse. But what said Henries Queene,
For

Torke and Lancaster

For as I heare, she was then in place?

Mes. Tell him quoth she, my mourning
And I am ready to put armour on.

Ed. Then belike she meanes to play the
But what saide Warwicke to these iniuries?

Mes. He more incensed then the rest m
Tell him quoth he, that he hath done me
And therefore Ile vncrowne him er't be

Ed. Ha, durst the Traitor breath out
But I will arme me to preuent the worst
But what is Warwicke friends with Marg

Mes. I my good Lord, they are so link
That young Prince Edward marries War

Cla. The elder, belike Clarence shall
All you that loue me and Warwicke follo

Exit

Ed. Clarence and Somerset fled to War
What say you brother Richard, will you

Glo. I my Lord, in despite of all the
For why hath Nature made me halt do
But that I should be valiant and stand t
For if I would, I cannot runne away,

Edw. Penbrooke, go raise an army p
Pitch vp my Tent; for in the field this
I meane to rest, and on the morrow m

Ile march to meete proud Warwicke, er
Those stragling troopes which he hath

But ere I go, Montague and Hastings,
You aboue all the rest are neere allyed
In blood to Warwicke: therefore tell r

If you fauour him more then me, or no
Speake truly, for I had rather haue you
Then hollow friends.

Mont. So God helpe Montague, as h
Hast. And Hastings, as he fauours E

Edw. It shall suffice, Come then let